THE ROYAL
DANISH
ACADEMY OF MUSIC

PROFESSORS BINE BRYNDORF (DK) AND HANS FAGIUS (SE)

Bine Bryndorf trained under Michael Radulescu, Daniel Roth and William Porter. She has released several critically-acclaimed recordings, including the complete organ works of D. Buxtehude and several works by J. S. Bach

Hans Fagius trained in Stockholm under Alf Linder, and in Paris under Maurice Duruflé. He is well known as a recording artist, whose productions include a complete recording of the organ works of J. S. Bach and several recordings of romantic repertoire. He regularly writes on organ-related subjects for professional journals.

Both Bine Bryndorf and Hans Fagius give regular recitals and master classes all over the world, and often participate in juries at international organ competitions.

THE ORGAN DEPARTMENT

The teaching staff of the organ department is composed of internationally-renowned teachers, and the department's many international students provide the foundation for a very diverse and inspirational study environment, with modern rehearsal and concert facilities.

The Academy's organ centre is centrally located in the building, and houses a great stylistic variety of instruments for practice and teaching. The organ department co-operates closely with the other departments of the Academy, particularly the early music department. The organ department also collaborates with many of Copenhagen's principal churches, which provide practice and concert facilities for our students.

THE ROYAL DANISH ACADEMY OF MUSIC, COPENHAGEN

The Royal Danish Academy of Music (DKDM) is located in newly-renovated buildings in the heart of Copenhagen.
